MOOD: 😞 bored

MUSIC: guess.

Guess where I am?

There's not enough comp time in the world, Spleen.

Is it just me, or is that Roy Orbison song a little... suggestive?

COLLAPSE

I hear you baby. At least tonight I could bring it home with me, and find someone else to pick up Puppy from driver's ed so I could finish it uninterrupted.

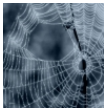

Did you eat?

Feel like someone should have been asking Ms. Harvey that question. So easy to forget when you're all busy being brilliant and stuff.

I was twee like that for so long. Now I am a bit fleshier, but I am older, and I hear that change is natural. But when I was twee like that, for years and years, I was eating ALL OF THE TIME. It was just my metabolism. Now, if anything, I think I eat less.

And you are right. Brilliant. Awesome. Fabulous.

I have a five gallon bucket of split pea soup and all the crackers I can handle.

Wooork makes the world go 'round.

Phooey! I vote for music, not work.

Well, but you do important work, right? I, on the other hand, work on big long cases that move big amounts of money on paper from one company to another, after five years of litigation and typically by settlement without a trial. My work? I think the term we use in econ is "rent-seeking." Or "non-value added costs."

I am glad you are eating, but da-amn that's a lot of peas. I'm growing peas! I can make homemade pea soup!

But PS: Hey! don't come to Ann Arbor and drive or walk near the roads, because my child is DRIVING ON THEM.

I am all wonky because of it. His glee is fabulous but my heart!!!!

also, now, I think that means I am old.

If by "important" you mean groveling through twenty-four years of ViCAP reports. It is amazing how much paperwork is generated by paperless systems.

Driving. They let kids do that now? Why, in MY DAY....

Your day was fifteen minutes ago. I feel like Duke listening to me.

You checking for cat barf before you put them on? Because, baby, that's just how love is. (That should be in a song.)

Your love looks like hate. The kind of hate that demands chicken.

And if I'm never home to provide chicken, well...
